Information Sheet

Introduction

The IAEA Nuclear Security Series (NSS) Objectives and Essential Elements of a State's Nuclear Security Regime (NSS No.20) calls for the establishment of contingency plans to respond to malicious activities at nuclear facilities. The document also states that the contingency plans should be appropriately exercised by all license holders and authorities concerned. The Nuclear Security Recommendations on Physical Protection of Nuclear Material and Nuclear Facilities (NSS No.13) further states that “[P]erformance testing ... should include appropriate exercises, for example force-on-force exercises”. The training course will provide information and practical guidance for the development, conduct and evaluation of safe and effective facility-level performance testing exercises involving a simulated combat between a mock-up adversary force and on-site response forces.

Objectives

The objective of the international workshop is to provide information and guidance in order to assist the Member States with the preparation, development, and evaluation of performance testing exercises that will determine if the on-site response forces can provide an effective and timely response to prevent radiological sabotage of nuclear facilities and theft of nuclear material.

Target Audience

Participants should be personnel responsible for the preparation, conduct and evaluation of performance testing of response forces at nuclear facilities. Participants should be familiar with response force operations and security contingency planning. Preference may be given to participants who have participated in an IAEA workshop on Management of the Response to a Nuclear Security Events at Nuclear Facilities. Generally, participants are expected to come from the on-site and off-site response force organizations, nuclear facility's physical protection units, and regulatory authorities. Focus on member states that have operating reactors (NPPs & Research Reactors).
