Information Sheet

Introduction

Many countries embarking on nuclear power and research programs have established their nuclear regulatory bodies, yet their activities related to nuclear security are currently being undertaken without the necessary nuclear security competence. These countries have expressed their need for capacity building of their regulatory staff to perform regulatory functions and enhancement of their regulatory frameworks for nuclear security. This training course aims to provide the necessary guidance and training to staff of the regulatory bodies for the effective implementation of the nuclear security regulatory functions using a systematic approach to training. The course will consist of lectures and group exercises. During the course, the participants will apply the course concepts and principles through practical exercises.
